

Achieving An Aids-Free Generation

The Presidential Advisory Council on HIV/AIDS (PACHA) was established to provide advice, information, and recommendations to the Secretary of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) regarding programs and policies intended to improve the U.S. response to the HIV/AIDS epidemic including the promotion of effective prevention of HIV disease and improved delivery of HIV care, treatment, and housing services and to advance a progressive HIV/AIDS research agenda. On July 13, 2010, the White House released the National HIV/AIDS Strategy (NHAS or Strategy) and charged PACHA with two tasks: 1) establishing a mechanism to monitor progress toward achieving the NHAS goals, and 2) developing recommendations for ways to promote and normalize safe and voluntary disclosure of HIV status in various contexts and circumstances. Through this Strategy, an HIV/AIDS-specific vision for the United States was outlined for the first time: The United States will become a place where new HIV infections are rare and when they do occur, every person regardless of age, gender, race/ethnicity, sexual orientation, gender identity or socio-economic circumstance, will have unfettered access to high quality, life-extending care, free from stigma and discrimination. In addition, the NHAS established three ambitious goals for the Nation to work toward by 2015: Reducing the number of people who become infected with HIV; Increasing access to care and improving health outcomes for people living with HIV; and Reducing HIV-related health disparities. Over the last several years, PACHA has been working diligently on recommendations to help achieve the goals set forth in the Strategy. PACHA recommendations and resolutions adopted to date are highlighted in this progress report. Furthermore, this report outlines both NHAS progress and challenges identified thus far and, more importantly, outlines specific issues and areas that require further attention and action in the immediate term.
