

Gitarre, Etuden Werk Heft 2 / Studies for Guitar (Book 2 Elementary Grade)

Heinrich Albert (16 July 1870 - 12 March 1950) was a German guitarist, composer and teacher - the most prominent German classical guitarist of his time. As a teacher, composer and editor of guitar music around 1900, Heinrich Alberts only rival in Europe was Francisco Tarrega.[3] In comparison to Tarrega, Albert was more active in editing chamber music including the guitar, less so for solo guitar. He arranged and published 11 volumes of Hausmusik for flute or violin, viola and guitar and 23 volumes of Die Gitarre in der Haus- und Kammermusik vor 100 Jahren [The guitar in home and chamber music 100 years ago] (from 1918). Alberts 5-volume guitar method was unrivalled in German-speaking countries for several decades and have unjustly fallen into neglect, as several experts acknowledge their value to this day. As a composer, Albert was a Classicist, occasionally using a freer harmonic approach with an accessible degree of technical difficulty. Some of his music makes use of elements of Italian and Spanish folkmusic. His works were played by most major guitarists in the first half of the 20th century. He was then largely forgotten and has been rediscovered only after around 2000.
