

Evermorley: Book Three of the Manny Jones Series

In book three, Evermorley, Manny Jones is once again desperately looking for Dolly and Stacy, after they disappeared yet again, along with Abel, at the end of their second worldwide satellite concert in Antarctica. Manny goes on the trail of Carrie Sun, their latest agent, and he ends up in upstate New York where he gets arrested, meets a girl named Brooke, gets bailed out, and goes along with Brooke back up to Carrie Sun's house. They hide in the basement until trouble is gone and find a secret door that leads them underground to more supernatural adventures with Cain still hot on the trail of course. They end up back on the underground railway and stop at many weird places until finally Brook disappears, leaving Manny at a station that is about three to five miles under Antarctica. He then meets and hangs out with a supernatural being who leads him to an elevator that zips him into a huge, ultra-modern stainless steel city that is evidently millions of years old. Here he finally hooks back up with Dolly, Stacy, and Abel. Abel has a spinning flying machine and takes them back to the place where they practice their music once again.
