

The Puce Planet

Project Wagon Train was amazing, ambitious and doomed. Six young astronauts would embark on the adventure of a lifetime. Unfortunately those in control at the Space Academy omitted to inform them that it probably involved a short life as there was no return ticket planned for the journey. But the best laid plans, especially those formulated by the Space Academy, have a tendency to go wrong. Someone accidentally turned the clock off in the spacecraft and the hibernating astronauts slept peacefully on for years after their intended wake up date, unaware they were lost in space. When they finally awoke it was to discover they were running out of fuel and life support and their computer had gone rogue. They had only two choices left to them, die where they were, or crash onto an unknown planet and most probably die there. They chose probable over certainty but their choice of planet on which to crash was unfortunate. The inhabitants of the Puce planet were not known for their hospitality. They were however renowned for their voracious appetites. If it moved, eat it. Especially if it didn't move quickly enough. If they survived the crash, the astronauts were facing the mother of all fights for survival in a strange and hostile new world. Adam and Eve had had it easy! They had only one serpent to deal with.
