

Not Just A Mission - life behind the uniform

In this book the writer, Regina Birkehorn, describes the Head On method which provides knowledge, facts and tools that soldiers and people close to them can use when handling a crisis. By using this method you can get the knowledge and the understanding of what is considered as normal behavior when a person is experiencing a crisis and what it means to live with a soldier that has returned from a war with trauma haunting his civil life. When soldiers returns from a mission abroad the focus should be on the joy of being reunited with family, friends, colleagues, and to find the everyday life that they had before they left. But why do nightmares, flashbacks, physical pain, sleeping disorders, PTSD and anxiety consume so much time from the soldiers life? Follow stories from soldiers that have returned from a war and how their friends and family understand how life behind the uniform will change them for the rest of their life.
