

Polohanis Pearl

In the land of Ebelvie, a war has been raging for eighty long years. The Umaris, who fight with their advanced technology, battle against the Koys and their magic for control of the Mainland. Fifteen-year-old Sybil Marshall who prefers to be called Sam leads a pampered lifestyle in this time of conflict. Her hometown of Heartlin has always been a haven from the wars bloodshed, but as its troops prepare to leave for yet another far-off battle, her father, a famous Umari major left to raise her alone after her mother died, seems to unravel as his departure nears. Everything starts to change when he presents her with a long-delayed gift from her mother and a woman named Polohani begins to haunt her dreams. One night, Sam finds herself in danger and is saved by a strange boy, who claims to know her mother and reveals an even greater threat to her fathers unit. She has to act fast as Heartlin becomes the next battles main attraction. With her world falling apart, Sam must find a way to put her insecurities and her prejudice aside in order to save all she has left.
