

Servant for the Present (The Secret Art of Failure Book 3)

As the Servitors strive to end their hellish Time of Waiting, they must choose what is to come for themselves and their students. Gun-slinging monk Kourt Crowe is a master of secrets, including Assassination, Hunt, and Trigger; he's also a fan of rock music, a gourmand, and an accomplished gardener--not to mention being a sexy alien shape-shifter, who loves sex in all its forms. His student and lover Kato Giavanni, self-described five-star hottie, is a badass hacker and psychic spy on a journey of sexual self-discovery. Once again stand together to protect their Fellowship. With their love stronger than ever, a bond tempered by pleasure and pain forming the foundation of their defenses, they are prepared to defeat any enemy. But with the youngest generation of their College to watch over, and threats from within the Fellowship itself, they seemed destined once more to fail. Though they have no hope of success, they gather their brothers in a new kind of battle: restoring peace to the Fellowship itself. By reviving long-lost arts and seeking out knowledge long assumed lost, they themselves threaten the very peace they hope to create. They unsettle the compromises that have crippled the traditions of their Fellowship. But in this moment of chaos, the opportunity arises to forge a family that is intended to endure--but it has to begin with them.
